

Anđela Kojadinović, a former Divac scholarship recipient, was one of 39 outstanding high school students who received laptops in 2018 through an Ana and Vlade Divac Foundation support program for young people from families displaced from the Republic of Serbian Krajina.

In October 2025, Anđela graduated from the Faculty of Medical Sciences in Kragujevac and earned her medical degree. She is currently completing her medical internship. The laptop supported her throughout her education. Interestingly, her sister also used the same computer, so it could be said that it “made it through” two high schools and two university degrees before finally being replaced with a new one in early 2026.

Support provided to young people at the right moment can be an important step on the path toward major achievements in life and can make a lasting difference.
